John Hartman, pioneer settler of South Bend, who will be among One Was Speeding While Other the group of pioneers in the pageant scene depicting the departure of the argonauts of '49" for the west, has written the following song which will be sung by these original pioneers and which is very similar to the actual song which was sung by them on their long journey

> When gold was found in '59 The people thought it true. And thousands of them were fools enough To pack their grub clear through.

But when they got out to the mines They found they were mistaken .-With hand carts and wheel barrows too, The back track they were takin'

While some of them went out to work With pans and picks and shovels. And swore they couldn't make their grub If they all went to the devil.

For one poor meal a day And thousands of them started home A beggin on their way. And then we all turned right about And traveled down the Platte A trudging homeward on our way. And satisfied at that.

Some others then went out to work
